Today was the hardest day of our journey so far. In the morning, we came to a narrow river. It looked pretty calm, so we decided to cross it. Pa drove the horses into it, and they began to swim. Soon we realized that the water had a strong current. The horses panicked. Pa reacted quickly. He handed me the reins, and he jumped into the water to help lead the horses across. A few moments later, we were safe on dry land again. I was so thankful!
